RESTORE PRICE CONTROLS, AIM OF DEMOCRATS

Federation's Resolution Asks Truman To Call Special Session of Congress.

A resolution urging President Truman to call a special session of congress for the purpose of enacting price control legislation on all the necessities of life similar to price controls enforced by the former office of price administration, was adopted at last night's session of the sixteenth annual convention of the Federated Democratic Women of Ohio. Adoption of the resolution and the nomination of officers to be elected for the coming two years made up the business session which preceded a program of entertainment and an informal reception. The two-day convention, which opened yesterday at Hotel Harding, will close today with a luncheon, followed by the election of officers. Miss Genevieve Blatt, president of the Young Democratic Clubs of Pennsylvania, was to speak at the luncheon.

President Truman will be notified of the action taken by the Ohio Democratic women today, Mrs. Marygeorge Watkins of Kent, president of the state organization, said. A copy of the resolution also will be forwarded to the president pro tem of the U. S. senate and the speaker of the house of representatives.

Blame Republicans

In calling for the special session of congress the resolution states that the eightieth congress, dominated by members of the Republican party, saw fit to pass legislation eliminating government price controls on foods, clothing and other necessities, and charges that such action has failed completely to keep prices at a normal level as promised by the Republican leaders. Instead, the resolution states, an inflationary increase in prices which is getting beyond control, resulted.

Another resolution calling for a period of 30 days to elapse after the election of new officers in order to give the retiring officers an opporunity to complete outstanding business, also was adopted by the organization.

Only the office, that of president, is being contested in today's election. Candidates for that office are Miss Marie Ryan of Cleveland, presented by the nominating committee, and Mrs. Estelle Armstrong of LaRue, president of the Women's Division of the Marion County Democratic club, who was nominated from the floor.

Mrs. Watkins Presides

Mrs. Watkins presided for the business session and Mrs. Elsie Socie of Marion, was in charge of the entertainment program. Clarence Kantzer of Bucyrus, with Miss Ruth Ludwig at the piano, directed group singing. Mrs. A. L. Kessler played two piano numbers, "In a Country Garden," Grainger, and "The Anniversary Song," and responded with an encore. Mrs. Socie sang "American Prayer," and a song in keeping with the convention. She played her own accompaniment. Mr. Kantzer sang "Shortnin' Bread" and "Proposal," accompanied by Miss Ludwig and also gave an impersonation, and Miss Fae Burr of Cardington gave a reading. A business meeting of the federation board was held in connection with a dinner served in the presidential suite preceding the program.

Giving as the cause of defeat in elections the laxness of women in registering and voting and seeing that others register and go to the polls on election day, Mrs. Watkins, in her address yesterday afternoon issued a challenge to the women of her party. Reminding her audience that there are more than one million seven hundred thousand more women eligible to vote than there are men, she stated that the number who failed to register or go to the polls also is larger. The job of Democratic women today, she said, is to interpret and translate privileges as well as the responsibilities that are bestowed on American citizens.

Lauds Democratic Leadership

Turning to the political picture Mrs. Watkins said that during the years of able Democratic leadership, the Republicans had only to attack or to follow and added that "they were too lax to think in terms of leadership or prepare themselves for it." This laxity, she explained, has been demonstrated in their slow-

Corn, Wheat Prices Plummet But Living Cost Reaches Peak

By The Associated Press

Corn and wheat prices continued their plunge on the Chicago board of trade today for the third consecutive day as the labor department reported that living costs for city dwellers hit an all time peak in July and probably have gone "a whole lot higher" since then.

Corn prices, which crashed the permissible limit under exchange rules of eight cents on Thursday and again on Friday, dropped as much as eight cents today, with September opening at $2.38½ to $2.39.

Wheat dropped as much as 10 cents, the limit, for the second straight day. May wheat was $2.46¾, off 10.

The downward market trend continued as the bureau of labor statistics reported in Washington that the cost "of living essentials used by moderate income families in large cities" stood at 158 per cent of the 1935-39 average in mid-July, a one per cent increase over mid-June.

Costs Probably Higher

A labor department official said mid-September figures were not yet available, but that living costs probably were "a whole lot higher now" because of "the steep wholesale price climb we've had in recent weeks."

Meanwhile, the country-wide verbal bombardment at the high cost of living grew in volume.

But the downward price trend in most of the major grain and livestock markets this week carried more hope for the consumer that some relief from the soaring prices for food and others items was in sight.

Secretary of Agriculture Anderson, who on Monday will meet with President Truman's food study committee, expressed hope the price drops in the grain markets would "start a downward trend" in the general cost of living.

"I hope prices soon will begin to reflect a realistic trend," Anderson told reporters in Chicago where he changed trains yesterday for his trip to Washington. "The solution of the price question lies in production. If we produce more and more, prices will go down."

Prepare Price Action

Anderson and other top government officials prepared to take some action designed to stem the soaring prices for food and other items.

There has been talk for and against restoring price controls, suggestions for voluntary reduction of meat consumption and broader export controls. Secretary Anderson said he favored any voluntary rationing program that would relieve the demand for high priced foods but opposed federal rationing.

But in Philadelphia, Henry A. Wallace, former vice president, told reporters that the "only effective way" to lower the cost of living was for congress to restore rationing and price controls.

Senator Ives, (R-NY), disagreed, and said that price controls would cut production and encourage black markets. He said he would oppose restoring federal controls except as a last resort.

Taft Blames Truman

In San Francisco, Senator Taft (R-Ohio), accused President Truman of a policy of "planned inflation" and said the direct result was the high cost of living. He told a reporter that another depression is possible "if this price situation remains the same.

The Ohio Republican suggested that the nation seek to level off prices and wages at 50 to 60 per cent above 1939 levels, and added they now were 80 to 100 per cent above 1939. High prices, Taft said, will be the central issue in the 1948 presidential election campaign.

Sen. Francis J. Myers (D-Pa.), in a statement in Philadelphia commenting on Taft's San Francisco address, asserted that the "real cause of the present disastrous inflation" was Taft's "own action last year in killing effective price control." He said Taft was "doing his best to camouflage the real cause," and that he realizes the American people are holding him largely responsible for our present economic crisis."

"Time for Action"

As the oratory on the price situation continued, the Independent Communications Workers of America union, which claims a membership of 200,000 telephone workers, urged congress and President Truman to take "positive and concrete steps" to reduce prices. "It is time for action, not words," the union said.

There was action on most of the nation's commodity markets yesterday and the break in prices came as wholesale food prices reached an all-time high. One survey disclosed demand for high-priced food items was slumping in the country's retail stores. Indicating some success in con-

SHOVEL CO. TO LEASE PLANT

Marion Concern Will Operate Former War Factory in Cambridge.

Plans to lease an industrial plant at Cambridge for manufacture and assembly of certain types of shovels and drag lines now being manufactured by subcontractors in other localities, were announced today by Harvey T. Gracely, president of the Marion Power Shovel Co.

The industrial plant situated in the northeastern section of Cambridge was operated during the war by the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. The one story plant includes 110,000 feet of floor space. Area of the property to be leased by the Marion Power Shovel Co. approximates 25 acres.

Mr. Gracely's announcement follows the placing of a bid by the Cambridge Community Industrial Association, from whom the Power Shovel company will lease the property, with the War Assets Administration. The industrial association, a non-profit organization comprising Cambridge businessmen, submitted a bid of $177,000 for the property. In addition to the building and grounds, equipment covered in the bid included lathes, milling machines, radio drill grinders, shears and stands.

The Cambridge Industrial Association was the sole bidder for the property. The purchase terms call for a 20 per cent down payment with the balance to be retired in 10 years at 4 per cent interest.

In commenting upon his company's move, Mr. Gracely said: "The Cambridge plant will be leased to the Marion Power Shovel company for manufacture and assembly of some of their shovels and draglines now being

Fiery Fiorello H. LaGuardia, 64, Thrice New York's Mayor, Dies

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Sept. 20—Fiorello H. LaGuardia, 64, three times mayor of New York and former director general of UNRRA, died today.

The fiery political leader had been in a coma since Tuesday night when he collapsed at his home. His health had been failing since last June when he underwent an operation which disclosed an incurable pancreas condition.

The announcement of his death brought an immediate tribute from his successor as chief executive of New York, Mayor William O'Dwyer.

"In his death the people of the city, tthe state and nation have lost a great, patriotic citizen," O'Dwyer said. He added:

"I fully believe that his unselfish devotion to the people and his untiring and energetic efforts to promote public welfare contributed to a great extent to the failing health which culminated in death today."

LaGuardia died in his sleep, Dr. George Baehr, attending physician said. Dr. Baehr had been at the LaGuardia home since 7:30 last night. Dr. Meyer Karsh, another physician, also was there.

FIORELLO LAGUARDIA

When LaGuardia died at 7:22 a. m., his wife, their two children, Eric, 15, and Jean, 18, and Mrs. LaGuardia's sister, Miss Elsie Fisher, were at the bedside.

SHERIFF HUNTS MISSING GIRL NEAR PROSPECT

Handbag, Shoe and Hair Ribbon Found Along Highway Only Clues Uncovered.

Sheriff LeRoy Betterer is leading a search today for a 16-year-old high school girl from near Prospect missing since last night when she failed to return home from a visit to the home of a friend.

Object of the search is Roxie Ann Green, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Green. The family resides about four miles east and a mile north of Prospect on County road 124.

The girl's handbag, one shoe and a hair ribbon were found along the road from Prospect to her home by her father and sheriff's office men this morning.

Visited in Prospect

According to her mother, Roxie had been in Prospect visiting a school friend, Norma Sparks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Sparks of Prospect. Roxie was last seen by the Sparks girl when the couple parted in Prospect, Roxie starting to walk home. The time was shortly after 7 p. m.

Becoming alarmed when their daughter had failed to return home by 11 o'clock, the Greens called the sheriff's office. A search for the girl was instigated but no traces or clues to her whereabouts have yet been uncovered.

The girl had attended the Prospect-Chesterville football game at Chesterville, and had returned as far as Prospect, where her return home was delayed by failure to make a bus connection. She visited with the Sparks until deciding to walk home.

Mrs. Belva Berry saw the girl walking past her home just outside of Prospect at about 8 p. m.

Mrs. Paul Rodgers, who lives several miles further along the road, did not see the girl walking past her house, and believes she would have known if Roxie walked past because her dogs always bark at pedestrians passing by. She did not hear her dogs barking last evening.

A family living near the Greens, the Andersons, reported that a Model A Ford sedan stopped in front of the lane to the Green home at about 8 p. m. and either picked up or dropped something. The purse, shoe, and hair ribbon

EXTEND INJUNCTION AT MT. GILEAD PLANT

Picket Restraining Order Continued Indefinitely.

Special to The Star

MT. GILEAD, Sept. 20 — The temporary restraining order granted the North Electric company against the UAW (CIO) Sept. 12 forbidding the union to interfere with company employes wishing to enter or leave the Mt. Gilead plant and limiting the number of pickets employed by the union, was continued "indefinitely" at a hearing conducted by Judge Leland Rutherford in Morrow county common pleas court Friday. No date has been set for further hearing.

The company sought a permanent injunction against UAW organizer Edward Duck and eight union affiliated employes from interfering in any way with company operations, either by force, intimidation or threats or with employes of the plant. The restraining order limited the number of pickets to seven at Mt. Gilead.

At Friday's hearing, which opened at 9 a. m. and adjourned after 4 p. m. pickets were reduced in number from seven to five and the restraining order clarified by Judge Rutherford to

British Begin Evacuation Of Troops from Greece

By The Associated Press

ATHENS, Sept. 30 — Premier Themistokles Sophoulis said today the British were beginning to withdraw the last of their occupation forces from Greece.

His statement coincided with reports from central and northern Greece of renewed warfare by guerrillas, whose Communist leaders have spurned a government offer of amnesty.

Sophoulis said the withdrawal of a British battalion from Salonika marked the beginning of the complete exodus of British troops from his country. The Tommies have been here since they helped the Greeks oust the Nazis three years ago.

French Leader Says Clash Between U. S. and Russia Can't Be Reconciled.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Sept. 20—French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault declared today that the growing conflict between the United States and Russia has reached such a critical stage that further efforts to reconcile the two viewpoints seemed hopeless.

In France's opening policy speech before the United Nations asembly, Bidault frankly acknowledged that he saw no way out of the crisis sharpened by the speeches of Secretary of State George C. Marshall and Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky.

"The French delegate deems it futile and dangerous to conceal the magnitude and seriousness of the crisis," Bidault told the 55 national delegations as the assembly continued its fourth day of general debate.

France Sought Compromise

In his pessimistic and straightforward speech, Bidault said France had devoted her efforts toward compromise and reconciliation between Russia and the United States since the beginning of the United Nations but such efforts now seemed futile.

"Today the means are meager for finding a meeting ground for the two main statements the assembly has heard," he declared, referring to the Marshall and Vishinsky declarations.

"It is but honest to say that one does not see how they can be reconciled," he said.

As a result, he said, France would take her stand squarely on the "question laid before us." He then went on to outline France's position on specific issues—lining up with the United States on almost every question.

Ignores Vishinsky

Bidault did not comment directly on Vishinsky's proposal for United Nations action against what the Russian called "warmongers" in the United States.

The Soviet attack launched by Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky was expected to be pressed forward today by chief

TAFT SAYS SLUMP MAY BE IN OFFING

By The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 20—Senator Taft (R-Ohio) headed for Reno and a formal speech on the reclamation issue today after declaring in San Francisco he felt a depression may be directly behind prevalent high prices.

The Ohio senator, who has been the object of Democratic national committee criticism because of his part last year in remodeling the OPA law, told reporters "if this price level remains, the conditions might bring a depression," adding:

"We have escaped the 1920 type, but we are not past the kind that came 10 years after the last war."

In a cost-of-living speech before the Commonwealth club yesterday Taft, who heads the senate's policy committee, said this country should level off both wages and prices at from 50 to 60 per cent of the point they reached in 1939.

Motoring to Reno today, Taft planned to address a Republican group tonight, not only on the reclamation issue but on the Taft-Hartley law, which he was co-author.

DYING STORM LEAVES COAST IN SHAMBLES

City Faces New Problem as Hurricane Dwindles; 12 Reported Dead.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 20—Hurricane-groggy New Orleans grimly battled serious floods today as the 11-day-old tropical storm born in the Atlantic moved beyond Shreveport with fitful gusts and heavy rains.

There were unconfirmed reports of at least a dozen deaths, but only one known fatality was officially recognized. The body of an elderly man, dressed in denim dungarees, was thrown ashore yesterday morning near Gulfport at the storm's peak.

Property damage will run into the millions, a hurried survey revealed.

Reporter James H. Gillis of the Times-Picayune in a communication field from Gulfport, Miss., via naval reserve radio last night said there were unconfirmed reports of at least a dozen deaths from drowning and other causes.

No Bodies Recovered

No bodies had been recovered, he said, but added five were known to be dead in the Pass Christian, Miss., area.

The entire coastal area was isolated. Communications still were difficult this morning.

Refugees continued to pour in to shelters.

Lake Borgne late last night backed up into Bayou Bienvenue, broke through a railroad embankment and flooded a sizeable section of the eastern part of New Orleans.

Police reported that 2,000 persons have been evacuated and rescue efforts are still under way.

The lake overflowed ahead of the heavy winds and had caused no damage until the heavy embankment of the Southern railway gave way.

An area 25 blocks long and 16 blocks wide in a residential section of New Orleans was under water. There were no estimates of its depth.

Open To Mississippi

Lake Borgne adjoins Lake Ponchartrain and is about 10 miles east of New Orleans. The east end of the lake is open to the Mississippi sound.

With seven already reported dead in southern Florida in the wake of the storm, a meager radio report received by a ham operator in Jackson, Miss., from the naval reserve station at Gulfport, Miss., told of six being killed by the storm in the Gulfport-Biloxi area and some 400 being injured.

Only bare information was obtainable, but the picture in that Gulf resort area was grim. Battered houses, splintered boats and first aid workers driving themselves through the night to adminster first aid by flashlight to some 400 injured collected in the naval reserve armory at Gulfport.

And, as an aftermath of the hurricane, a tornado rose at Apalachicola, Fla., cutting a 250-foot wide swath for three miles through that northwest Florida town. One hundred were injured, 14 seriously enough to require hospitalization.

Mass of Wreckage

From Biloxi westward to New Orleans information poured in by every conceivable means which indicated that region was a mass of wrecked houses, ruined vacation cottages, destroyed crops and boats staved in from stem to stern.

Railroad causways were reported down or under water. So were highways. Seawalls were badly battered. Bayous were in flood with a great area inundated.

And all through the region hundreds were reported homeless.

New Orleans was groggy from the hurricane's all-enveloping punches.

Streets were piled with debris—wrecked automobiles, torn signs, uprooted trees and fallen power lines. Communications were out all over town and telephone linemen and public utility crews labored mightily to restore service. Mayor De Lesseps Morrison counted the damage at $3,000,000 roughly. He said there was at least $1,750,000 damages to automobiles and homes. The remainder of the estimate, he distributed miscellaneously for signs, shrubbery, trees, plate glass windows and seawalls.

Town Is "General Mess"

Pascagoula, Miss., honeymoon haven, vacation spot and a vigorous little industrial community founded mostly on ship building, was reported a general mess. Five hundred residents were reported homeless by the Red Cross and disaster relief Chairman Karl Weisenberg said all of the town's 7,000 homes were damaged to some extent. There were at least 250 homes with water standing three feet deep on the first floor.

Vishinsky's UN Speech Termed Capable Street Fighting Job

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Russia's violent diatribe in the assembly of the United Nations yesterday and Thursday serves at least one useful purpose: It makes clear that Moscow is determined to pursue without deviation the international course it has been following ever since the end of the war.

This means that the Soviet world revolution for the establishment of Communism will continue along lines already established. Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vishinsky's pronouncement was not only a fierce attack on the America which stands in the way of aggressive Communism, but it was in effect an explosive "no" to all suggestions for any UN moves which might hamper Russia's ambition to Sovietize the globe.

DewittMackenzie

That's a logical strategy for the Soviet Union to pursue in view of the present international situation. Most of the Eastern Hemisphere is in a chaotic economic state which has reduced many countries to stark privation, including hunger. This is the day for which Communism has dreamed ever since the world revolution was conceived when the Bolshevists came to power 30 years ago.

Doing What Comes Naturally

What more natural than that Russia should make the most of its opportunity? The only new thing in the situation is that Moscow has tabled its cards—a move which was forced upon it deliberately by U. S. Secretary of State Marshall's challenge in the assembly Wednesday.

Vishinsky's speech wasn't constructive, and obviously wasn't meant to be. It was a capable job of two-fisted street fighting, which included calling of names.

It was, of course, a cry of defiance but many delegates noted that it was straight-from-the-shoulder Red propaganda which would make prime reading in Russia and would impress satellites and temporizing nations.

However, we shall make a mistake if we don't also take this speech to be a declaration of policy by the Soviet government.

The language which Vishinsky used has shocked a multitude. Your correspondent has attended may international conferences in various parts of the world and can not recall anything even approaching the deputy foreign minister's war-mongering charges against the United States and even against individuals.

Hits American Legion

One of Vishinsky's surprising (and one would say somewhat daring) attacks was made against the American Legion which includes the millions of Americans who did so much to save Russia in the Great war. He classed the "notorious American Legion" among the war-mongers.

Well, what does all this add up to? Naturally a lot of folk today are looking anxiously at their war barometers to see how they read. Well, so far as I see we are no nearer war today than we were before Vishinsky unburdened himself yesterday. That being so, we still can accept it as a fact neither Russia nor any other country wants war. All other things aside, the Soviet Union is not ready for war and won't be for many years.

Of course, if nothing happens to stymie the world revolution for the spread of Communism, the time will come when it will break against the shores of great countries which will fight to keep it out. However, that's a matter of the rather distant future. Something may intervene.

YOUR HEALTH

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

Backache

Perhaps the only ailment with more causes than backache is headache.

Thus, if 10 patients complaining of pain in the lower part of the back come to the doctor's office, the chances are that in each case the pain will come from a different source, and that each patient can be relieved only by a different treatment.

In one, the backache may be due to strain of the joints in the lower part of the spine brought about because habitual poor posture has bent the spine to one side. In another, the doctor may find a malformation of the spine which has been present since birth.

Of course, injuries are a well known cause of back pain. These injuries may affect the vertebrae or small bones in the spine. Arthritis or inflammation of the joints in the spine may develop following injuries.

Pressure on the nerves coming from the spine and consequent severe pain may occur from several different causes such as the slipping of bits of cartilage between the vertebrae known as intervertebral disks.

Disorders of the spine itself, such as arthritis, changes in the bones, tumor growths and infections all may be responsible for severe backache.

Among the infections which may affect the spine, are tuberculosis, gonorrhea, typhoid fever, and undulant fever or brucellosis. ache is fibrositis, a condition in which there is inflammation of the connecting or supporting tissues around the muscles.

It should also be remembered that it is not unusual for backache to be produced by disorders affecting the kidney, the bladder, and the organs of reproduction, and in men, the prostate gland.

In women, during middle life, long continued strain in the lower part of the back is commonly seen. It is usually worse after prolonged standing. Tiredness, as a rule, makes the aching worse.

These same symptoms may be produced by flat feet. Abnormal forward bending of the spine called lordosis may be a cause of low backache. The discomfort in such cases is always made worse by standing and walking. As a rule, it is worse at the end of the day.

Overweight frequently is associated with this kind of backache and may even be responsible for producing it.

Thus, when the patient has backache, the first thing the doctor does is to get a complete story of the symptoms; when they first started, where the pain is located, and how often it occurs. Then a complete physical examination is given and X-rays of the spine are taken.

Many low backaches occur or are made worse by sleeping in a bed that is too soft or that sags in the middle, thus keeping the spine from relaxing in the normal position. In such cases, the patient is usually awakened by the pain early in the morning. On arising the pain is worse but wears off towards the middle of the day.

Those who suffer from pain in the lower part of the back should not delay in having a careful study made to determine the cause.

Where low back pain is concerned hit or miss methods will accomplish little. Those who suffer from pain in the lower part of the back should not expect relief without a careful study to determine the cause and since so many of these disorders may have serious consequence if left untreated, there should be no delay in having such a study made.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

C.W.: At one time I had tuberculosis. Eleven years ago I lost my voice, never regaining it? What would cause this condition?

Answer: Complete loss of the voice might be due to damage to the nerves which supply the larynx or voice box, or to destruction of the vocal cords in the larynx. Also, there is a condition called hysteric aphonia, which might be responsible. Careful examination by a throat specialist may be needed to determine the cause in your case.

Beauty and Dignity . . .

For twenty years, this lovely funeral home has been in service. For twenty years, the people of Marion and the surrounding countryside have been learning to look upon the Schaffner-Denzer Funeral Home as the more desirable place from which to conduct funeral services. For twenty years, we have tried to make this Marion's finest funeral home.

Here, we believe you will find that beauty which a funeral home should have, and that dignity which should be an attribute of an establishment devoted to the sacred rites for those who have passed on. It is this combination of beauty and dignity which has won for our funeral home the approval of so many local people.

It is not essential that the funeral home be used; it is merely one of the many facilities which the Schaffner-Denzer organization makes available to all . . . without any additional cost whatsoever.

LA GUARDIA

many Goliath to become mayor of New York and then went on to set other records. He was the first "reform" mayor ever reelected and the first mayor to win three consecutive terms. He voluntarily retired after serving 12 years.

A practitioner of the rough and tumble, Mr. LaGuardia stepped on many many toes and had his own stepped on many times, in campaign season and out.

He has been called such things as "breast beating showman," "demagogue," "political mountebank," "vilifier with an unbridled tongue," "vain popinjay," and "cad."

A great dramatist, Mr. LaGuardia, while a member of congress, brewed "beer" in both his Washington and New York offices as a protest against national prohibition. He waved a 25-cent lamb chop and a $3 roast on the floor of the house of representatives to emphasize the high cost of living shortly after World War I.

Spoke Several Tongues

He addressed national groups in New York in their native language—Italian, German, French, Yiddish or Yugoslav. When persecution of the Jews was at its height in Germany, a delegation of Nazis visited New York and the mayor gave them an escort of Jewish policemen. A Nazi newspaper said that showed "a gross lack of taste" and was a "poor joke."

One of Mr. LaGuardia's remarks resulted in the United States making an apology to the German government. That was early in 1937—long before outbreak of World War II—when he suggested that the forthcoming New York World's Fair include in its exhibits a "chamber of horrors" in which there would be "the figure of that brown-shirted fanatic who is now menacing the peace of the world."

An angry outburst in the German press followed and the United States apologized. But the fiery mayor repeated the remark, made originally before a meeting of woman members of the American Jewish Congress, and said he stood by it. "Mr. Hitler's own government was quick to recognize that I meant him," Mr. LaGuardia said. "I don't know whether it is his guilty conscience or my power of description. . . . ."

Rated Tough Job

While the New York mayoralty is sometimes ranked second in importance and strain to the Presidency of the United States, Mr. LaGuardia carried on many other activities along with it.

Early in World War II he served as United States Director of Civilian Defense. He also was president of the U. S. Conference of Mayors and chairman of the American section of the Permanent U.S.-Canadian Joint Defense Board. In between he campaigned for his friend, President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Toward the end of his long tenure, Mr. LaGurdia was Director General of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration (UNRRA), a job he tackled with his usual gusto. "I want fast-moving ships, not slow-reading resolutions," he barked when he assumed that office. "From this point on the protocol is off. Our job is to take food wherever we can find it to people in need wherever they may be—and that's all."

Decorated for Work

For his UNRRA services, President Harry S. Truman awarded Mr. LaGurdia the highest civil decoration, the Medal for Merit, and said he had earned "the gratitude of millions in the world who were threatened with starvation."

Mr. LaGuardia's sombrero—black in winter, tan in summer—became a national institution and one of his nicknames was derived from it, "the Hat." The New York Daily News designated him as "Butch," which it said better suited him than "Little Flower," the English translation of Fiorello, and this name stuck. His middle name was Enrico which he Anglicized to Henry.

Born in New York Dec. 11, 1882, Mr. LaGuardia was the son of an immigrant who had arrived in the United States four years earlier from Foggia, Italy. His mother's native city was Flume. He was married in 1919 to Thea Almerigotti, who died in 1921. Eight years later he married Marie Fisher, his secretary. They had two adopted children, Jean, and Eric.

OHIO TIGHTENS UP REAL-ESTATE LAWS

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 20—Amendments tightening up Ohio's real estate laws—so that both broker and customer know just how they stand—go into effect next Wednesday.

The amendment, sponsored in the last legislative session by Rep Charles F. Baker (R-Painesville) on behalf of real estate boards, requires brokers to furnish all parties to a transaction with true copies of "all listings and other agreements" involved in the deal.

It also requires placing a licensed broker or salesman in charge of branch real estate offices, and brokers who do not have offices in Ohio must register their licenses in each Ohio county in which they do business.

Fred J Milligan, state commerce director, said the amendment represented "the final thinking" of real estate men throughout the state on what was needed to raise standards of the business and at the same time protect the public.

"Real estate men themselves frequently find themselves in a jam because their own records are inadequate on just what was agreed to in conferences with clients," he explained.

Vishinsky Speaks His Piece

DELEGATE Vishinsky's UN assembly speech left no doubt as to the course Russia plans to pursue at the present session—a session which may decide the future of the UN. Not since the late, unlamented Paul Joseph Goebbels has a speaker been so liberal with accusations of war-mongering.

Russia has no intentions of giving up the veto. This is not unexpected. If the United States were the only democratic power in a totalitarian world, it would guard the veto just as jealously as does Russia. Russia has no intention of altering any of the positions she took in the security council. More and more it becomes apparent there is no common ground for Russia and a non-totalitarian world. Suspicious of outsiders and suffering from what appears to be a terrific inferiority complex, Russian leaders have set up an iron curtain around their sphere of influence. This suspicion is reciprocated by non-Communist peoples who have seen country after country fall to Communist infiltration and are fully aware there are Communists in their midst.

If Russia withdraws from the UN, the organization falls of its high purpose and becomes little more than a league against Russia. With Russia in the UN it will be no more than a world forum from which Vishinsky & Co. air their views of world plots against Russia.

Wars, Hot and Cold

IN HIS current series of articles, Walter Lippmann has been discussing what he calls "The Cold War." There was a time when wars were wars, without qualifying adjectives. Now we have hot war, cold war, white war, red war, economic war, shooting war and undeclared war.

War has ceased to be simple physical combat. Wars overlap; they are of a complexity that staggers the imagination; historians see World War II only as an extension of its predecessor, and World War III may be a further extension.

Mr Lippmann's term seems more satisfactory than the synonymous "white war." It gets across the idea of hunger and suffering better. The pity is we have to use the word "war" at all. Certain "uncivilized" tribes in the South Pacific get along very well without any such word in their language.

National Breakdown

HERBERT L. MATTHEWS of the New York Times has written from London that Britain's latest coal strike is a symptom of a national nervous breakdown. Nothing else, he explains, could account for union workmen refusing to step up their production when the country is starved for coal." The strain of the war years, coming after the privations and bitterness of the prewar decades, have taken their toll" he declares.

Abnormal psychology has been more important than economics in national behavior, to the astonishment of those who foolishly believe in the fallacy of materialism as the basis of all behavior. Thus, before the war Germans were victims of a mass paranoia that made them think they were persecuted, a delusion shared by the Japanese. The French had a delusion of security, the Italians a delusion of power.

The delusions have been reshuffled in the postwar world, with the United States getting a fair share. The key to greater production in this country in 1947 is not merely higher wages but the will to produce more wealth for distribution among producers. Americans are still taking their thinking on this subject from men long since dead who believed coal miners should strike rather than mine more coal, because striking was the way to get even with the boss—men who never visualized a situation in which the welfare of the people as a whole depended on the efforts of the people as a whole.

Initials and Names

A LOOK back over the list of American presidents brings out the fact that Franklin D. Roosevelt and Warren G. Harding were the only ones customarily referred to with the middle initial included. Two, John Quincy Adams and William Howard Taft, had three-ply names.

Franklin D. Roosevelt was the only one known by his initials. First started by headline writers, use of F.D.R. made Roosevelt one of the few individuals in American history known as well by his initials as by his name. The closest approach was the elder Rockefeller, who even today 10 years after his death, is remembered as John D.

We just missed having another president known by first name, middle initial and last name. That was James G. Blaine. As with Roosevelt and Harding there was a rhythm to his name when the initial was included. That rhythm and the fact that his name rhymed with Maine, his home state, made it possible for him to be ridiculed in an irreverent couplet, which may have very well lost him the presidency.

Of such trivia history is sometimes made.

Factors in Socialist Failure

By RAYMOND MOLEY

British Troubles Due to Inherent Weaknesses.

THE voters of the United Kingdom may still prefer the Labor party to Churchill's Tories, but there is little doubt about the disillusionment of those who used to believe in socialism. The party may go on, but the theories on which it has lived for years have been discredited at home and abroad.

Socialists in the United States are hastening to assure us that the trouble is Britain itself, not socialism. Maybe so. But if we assess the reasons why the Labor government cannot successfully govern, we shall find the reasons why general socialism cannot succeed anywhere—especially in a big country.

No Experience

The first reason for this great debacle lies in the quality of the people at the head of the Labor government. Taken collectively, they are an unimpressive lot. That is not because they come of lowly origins. Many of them had every educational advantage. But they are in the main, second rate. Bevin was a powerful and successful labor leader. But as a statesman he has been blundering and visionless. Most of the members of the government made a career of debate. They have had little or no experiences in anything except the art of political evangelism. Running a government which assumes the practical operation of big enterprises takes more than the capacity to perform well on the stump.

A second point, bitterly pointed out in the British press, is the fact that an over-worked civil service cannot be loaded with the additional administrative burdens involved in socialism. Civil employes are not famous for vision. They are, for the most part, routineers. The stiffly resent change, because new governmental funcions involve the invention of new methods.

A third difficulty is the demand made upon a political government by groups which were factors in winning the election. In the present instance, the labor unions are forcing the Labor government to make concessions which have one purpose only—the selfish interests of their members. Such demands impair the capacity of the government to serve the whole nation. But promises have been made and promises must be kept.

All Cults Represented

A final problem in such a piebald group as the present Labor cabinet is diversity of viewpoint. From Shinwell and Strachey to Bevin and Dalton, all grades and cults of socialism are represented. A great business of log-rolling takes place in which every conceivable reform gets a little place in the grand plan. Some of these ideas when put in practice clash with others. Nothing has a chance to succeed, because nothing is given a full trial.

All these and more are reasons why a socialist regime is failing in Britain. They are, when carefully assessed, reasons why any socialist regime will fail in a big country

Most of these difficulties were present in Washington in New Deal days before the war. The Roosevelt cabinet, in his first two terms at least, was not distinguished. The rank and file of holdover civil servants were not in sympathy with the New Deal reforms. Labor demanded the Wagner Act with a fence around it. And the New Deal meant many things in many New Dealers, from Wallace to Morgenthau.

Only where small beginnings were made on the background of a free economy—as in some Continental countries like Sweden and Denmark—has socialism won a place in public confidence. In Britain they have tried to do too much, and they have succeeded—in doing too much.

Just a Minute

By JACK TARVER

Skirts Down, Pants Up
And Never the Twain..

Men's trouser fashions are changing, with some designers contending that the cuff should be worn a full four inches above the shoe top.

Shortly, if the extremists have their way, it'll be difficult to tell whether a citizen is a disciple of high fashion or a refugee from high water.

Of course, with most men, any change in the length of their pants is dictated solely by shrinkage.

Still, this new four-inches-above-the-shoetop fad may catch on despite an initial suspicion that it's a plot of the garter trust.

If so, one can only feel, with less and less of the feminine and more and more of the masculine leg exposed, that some one has made a horrible swap.

Incidentally, I had thought, what with women having to buy entire new wardrobes, that the men naturally would be wearing theirs longer.

Red Army Heart of Problem

By WALTER LIPPMANN

WE may now examine a question which must be answered before the policy, which I contend is preferable to the Truman doctrine, can be accepted with conviction. I have argued that we should concentrate our effort on the evacuation of Europe by the Red Army. What about the Communist partiest which are also the instruments of Soviet power? If the Red Army withdrew behind the frontiers of the Soviet Union, the Communist parties would remain—to put it bluntly, as a Soviet fifth column. They will be assisted, we may take it, by Soviet agents and by Soviet funds and Soviet contraband weapons and by Soviet propaganda and by Soviet diplomacy.

That is true. There will still be the problem of Communism. Nevertheless, the heart of our problem is, I contend, the presence of the Red Army in Europe. The Communist party in any country is the fifth column. It is, however, only a fifth column. There are the other four columns and they are the Red Army. The policy which I suggest is designed to separate the first four columns from the fifth, to divide the Red Army from the Red International. For the Soviet power is most formidable where they are able to work together, that is to say, where the Communist party has the support and protection of the Red Army.

Only Communist States

There are, as I write, no Communist states except within the zone of Russian military occupation. Outside the military boundary of the Soviet orbit those countries are most threatened with a Communist seizure of power into which the Red Army could most easily march. Within the Soviet zone, it would be interesting to see what would happen if the occupying force inside those countries or surrounding them were withdrawn. For it is one thing to resist a local dictatorship and quite another to resist the strongest land power on earth.

It is conceivable, though it has not yet happened, that a Communist party might win an election, or that it might seize the authority of government and protect it. But even if this happened the position of the Communist party would be incomparably less secure than if the Red Army were present to overawe the police and to suppress the resistance of the national army and of the national forces. In an unoccupied country, the Communist fifth column would have to fight and win a civil war before its authority was established. In an occupied country the Red Army can prevent a civil war and drive the resistance underground and reduce it to a guerrilla action.

I do not think there is any doubt, therefore, that the evacuation of Europe by the Red Army would alter the situation decisively. There would then be in the internal affairs of the European countries, no alien and irresistible military force actually deciding or threatening to decide the internal issues of power and authority. And once the Red Army had withdrawn to the frontiers of the Soviet Union, it could not easily return. For that would be an open act of aggression, an unmistakable violation of the treaty of settlement which would indubitably precipitated a general war.

Next Question

The next question is whether the objective of obtaining the withdrawal of the Red army is attainable. A certain answer to this question is, of course, impossible. We can only calculate the probabilities, and we can say that the objective I am contending for is concrete, substantial, intelligible to every one, and a normal and universally accepted objective at the conclusion and settlement of a war.

We may begin, moreover, by noting that in all our disagreements with the Soviet government, the Kremlin has always agreed that the purpose of these tedious negotiations is in the end to conclude treaties of peace with all the enemy states. Now a treaty of peace may call for the annexation of territory, it may call for a period of supervision and control until the enemy state has fulfilled certain demands and has met certain conditions. But if it has a treaty of peace, it must provide for an end to military occupation. The treaties which have been signed with Italy and with the satellite states are definite on this point. If and when treaties of peace are agreed to for Germany and Austria, they will have to contain definite stipulations for the withdrawal of the armies of occupation. In some form or other, at some time or other, no matter what supervision and control are imposed upon, what guaranties are exacted from Germany and exchanged among the Allies, these treaties of peace will fix a time when the Red army, and of course the British, the French, and the American armies also, can no longer, as a matter of legal right, remain in central and eastern Europe.

Therefore, in making the withdrawal of the armies the objective of our policy, we are seeking to accomplish a result which the Soviet government by the very act of negotiating peace treaties has agreed to in principle.

This is something on which to work. For in our disagreements, which are deep and stubborn, there is a common commitment which no one has challenged. If there is agreement on the terms of the German and Austrian treaties, the withdrawal of the armies will follow. This is a wholly different kind of commitment from those which were made at Yalta and at Potsdam, and were then violated later. As to what is democracy and what is a free election and the like, it is possible to differ honestly and to differ dishonestly.

But an agreement to evacuate an army must either be carried out or violated. It is not a question for the dialecticians, the ideologists, the sophists, and the casuists. It is not a matter which can be hidden behind an iron curtain. It is a matter of plain and quite obvious fact.

DOUBT ABOUT AMERICAN WAY OF LIFE
FREEDOM TRAIN
RUBE GOLDBERG

From News of Other Years

TEN YEARS AGO

It was Monday, Sept. 20, 1937.

Ambassador Nelson Johnson and his aides worked feverishly transferring documents to the American patrol boat, Luzon, for a 30-mile trip up the Yangtze to Wuhu, as the embassy staff prepared to leave Nanking, in the face of a Japanese threat to lay waste to the Chinese capital.

Miss Maud Gorham, president, and Mrs. Jay Maish, Mrs. Morgan Burke, Mrs. J. B Bray and Miss Ruth Gorham, members of the Marion Garden club motored to Youngstown to attend a meeting of the Garden club of Ohio.

John C Turner of South High street and Warren Rowley of East Church street left for Columbus where they were enrolled as freshmen in the department of commerce at Ohio State university.

Miss Mary Evelyn Lines, 28, a telephone operator with the Ohio Central company at Caledonia, died at the home of her uncle, James Lines.

Sales tax receipts the preceding week totaled $5,582.71, records in the office of County Treasurer Homer D. Cole showed.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

It was Tuesday, Sept. 20, 1927.

William Hamor of Mary street went to Athens to enroll at Ohio university.

Mrs. Laura E. Dombaugh of North State street and Mrs. David Rexroth of East Center street returned from Grand Rapids, Mich., where they attended the national convention of the G. A. R. and the auxiliary. They were accompanied home by Dr. Silas Hopkins of Lodi, Calif., who was to visit friends and relatives here.

It was announced that Marceline Day, screen actress who had a role opposite John Barrymore in "The Beloved Rogue," was known to many Marion residents. She was a step-granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Court of Hollywood, former Marion residents.

Mr. and Mrs. George Pluchel returned from a week's trip to Niagara Falls and points in Canada.

Sons were born to Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Cochrun of Mary street, Mr. and Mrs. George Webb of Orchard street and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bender of Reed avenue.

About Brass Knuckles

By FRANK TRIPP

RUSSIA says there's no sense in discussing amendments to the international atomic control plan. Meaning it must be their way or else. Okay, how about having it our way or else

In April, '46, I suggested a way. You should have seen the letters I got. They ran all the way from threats to bomb my shelter to wanting me drawn and quartered.

That was back when the share-all-with-the-enemy stuff was just getting started. When lots of folks were for making atomics for everybody from Haile Selassie to Joe Stalin; let the whole world in on it—like they're in our pockets.

It's amazing what a difference just a few months make; how watching the frog to see how he'll jump gives a better idea where to pitch the spear if you want to get the frog.

I'm going to reprint what I wrote then. Here it is:

"Suppose the United States established 40 or 50 secret as possible locations scattered over our vast expanse, from any one of which—even if all other posts were attacked and obliterated (not a likely prospect)—we could hand back to a sneak attacker all that he gave us—and then some.

"Equip every post with planes and enough atomic bombs to blow into kingdom come any outfit that monkeyed with the buzz saw. Up will go a lot of hands in holy horror, but that's the only language understood by the kind of aggressors we have encountered for the last 30 years."

We don't seem to care what we spend for defense. We shouldn't, but we might try to get our money's worth. This business of nations all the time wanting to lick the daylights out of each other is little more than grownups emulating the school lot bully.

Almost everyone will remember a bully who pushed other kids off the walk and banged their eyes if they protested. Then one day a calm and peaceful soul who would take no more locked horns with the bully and set him back in metin'. Nations get in just such positions now and then.

Once a harassed kid in my school got hold of a set of brass knuckles. They're pretty nasty things. With them one good wallop and the fight is over. A set of brass knuckles was as good as an atomic bomb in a kid's pocket.

This pestered lad never had to use the knuckles. He exhibited them generously, to the point that the prof finally relieved him of them. Meantime he came and went as free as a bird, while the bully kept his distance

All was going well till the prof cupped the knuckles. That night the bully got brave again and tried to whale the liver out of the disarmed kid on his way home from school

The boy who owned the knuckles eventually spent his life dealing with bullies and their ilk. He became one of the greatest penologists of all time, died just a few months ago—Warden Lewis E. Lawes.

Years later Prof. VanEtten and I got to be close friends. One day when we were reminiscing he said to me:

"Yes, I remember Lewis Lawes' brass knuckles. You know I made a great mistake. Those knuckles in Lewie's pocket preserved peace in at least one sector. In my desk they didn't help a bit."

Brass knuckles may seem a far cry from atomic bombs. But are they?

What would more likely keep atomic bombs off our heads than the certainty that, unless he demolished every bit of this big country at one fell swoop, the aggressor would be paid in kind?

Only that certainly will guarantee that aggression amounts to suicide.

Does anyone believe that Japan would have attacked Pearl Harbor if she had known what was going to happen to her?

The trouble with us is that we're too slow about getting tough.

And we've got to get tough!

Food Is Biggest Worry for Germans

By The Associated Press

BERLIN — The predominant worry of the German is where his next meal is coming from, an American military government information control division opinion survey shows.

Fifty-two per cent of the Germans in the American zone said "food" when asked "what are your greatest care and worries at present?" The same question last January brought a similar response from only 29 per cent of the population, just before the winter food crisis set in.

Clothing and fuel appear less urgent to the German. Only one German in seven, for example, expressed anxiety over fuel during the peak of winter.

Americans Help Build Berlin School

By The Associated Press

BERLIN—Twenty-five students from Denmark, Sweden, France, Great Britain, Holland, Switzerland and the United States are helping German students rebuild the Berlin Technical university which was laid in ruins during the war, a British announcement says.

The project was organized by the Friends Relief Service British Military Government's education branch.

The visitors and German students do heavy manual work and live and eat together. The university was reopened by British military government in April last year.

The Once Over

By H. I. PHILLIPS

There Is No Disappointment Like Home

THE Veterans Association, flooded with com- plaints from G I.s has come out with a [illegible] at the high percentage of defective, [illegible] shoddily built homes sold to them and which have already begun to unravel and come apart at the seams. "Already," says the administration, "as a result of failure to follow blueprints and specifications and the use of shoddy material and poor workmanship many have [illegible] structural weakness impossible to be cured."

This discovery that plenty of these G.I. houses were built for glider service in the first stiff wind comes a little late. People who watched them go up knew the truth long ago. To them it often looked as if the workers were uncertain whether they were building a home, a box-car or a turkey run.

In too many cases the timbers would have been inadequate for rabbit coops and some of the roofers seemed to feel they were either repairing a net or demonstrating a new type of cross ventilation at chimney levels.

We have seen walls so thin they could have been used for card tricks; we have noted hardware strictly five-and-ten and we have observed doors that no honest builder would put in cuckoo clocks

Yes, we know it was not easy to get good lumber and that there were other shortages but the big shortage was too often in those old-fashioned virtues; pride of workmanship and determination to do any job right.

The war heroes are not the only victims. Plenty of others who have tried to build a house in the last few years can testify to the "anything-goes" technique, the "never use two nails when one will hold the board in place six months" mood and the great increase in the ranks of home builders who cut corners, confuse blueprints with strip cartoons and think anything is a door that has a knob on it

There are many conscientious builders around, but still it takes a hunt and lots of luck to find one whose carpenters, plumbers and masons are jealous of their reputations as skilled craftsmen out to build a sturdy home and not an egg-crate.

There was a time when the builder who wouldn't chisel on workmanship, cut corners to save a few dimes on nails or look without concern at a wet cellar or a quick-collapsible porch was always on tap, but he is not too easy to find today.

"There is no place like home" is still being sung, but the implications are different and a note of gratitude creeps into it.

What's become of the inspector who would really inspect and the supervising architect who supervised? Any further questions?

Governor Tom Dewey says his corn crop has been a terrible failure. Things will be better when all the campaign speeches get into swing. Was the corn deaf to his plea of "Lend me your ears"?

Tom says he has been forced to sell off more cows than usual; Oh, well, in days like these "no moos is good moos."

Shares in a dog track have been put on the New York Stock Exchange. A fellow tried to get us to go after some yesterday by using an electric rabbit.

Believe it or not, 24 years ago Branch Rickey, Eddie Dyer and Bert Shotton were in a crucial series in St. Louis against Brooklyn. Know how? Rickey was part owner of the St. Louis club, Shotton was his assistant manager and Eddie Dyer fresh from Rice Institute, was being used as their rookie pitcher.

Howard Hughes has produced "The Outlaw" but can't get it off the ground. The critics seem to hold that if it had been shown six weeks ago Brewster would have won.

On one of those radio prize programs the other day a woman, asked what she would like more than anything in the world if she won, replied "To swim out beyond the breakers." "Why?" asked the master of ceremonies. "Every time my husband takes me to the beach he goes out beyond the breakers and keeps yelling for me to try it. It's been going on for 25 years," she replied, wowing the audience.

A Man Who . . .

By TRUMAN TWILL

PRESIDENTIAL politics is getting off to an early start for 1947. Living room debaters are getting hot under their hyperboles. Here and there a citizen is pulling out his purse and offering to bet on his wishful thinking. Dark horses are snorting in the pastures in the paddock. It's a lot of hoorah, but it won't bother us.

Our presidential candidate is Joe Blow of poor but honest parents (poor but honest parents please note) born in a mortgaged house (mortgaged house voters please note) in a field on the edge of town (urbanites and suburbanites please note).

It was two years before Joe's old man could pay the doctor, who was decent enough to wait (howdy Doc) but the grocer, butcher, candlestick maker and plumber also were conscientious (how you boys feeling?) Joe went through public school system by the skin of his teeth (didn't we all?) and finally landed a job as assistant flunkey who was afraid of the boss and couldn't call his soul his own (see what I mean, flunkies in the back room will have and Joe sent you.)

The turning point in our candidate's life came when he married a woman who was not good looking (hello, all you homely females) and began to raise a family. Like millions of others (do you recognize yourself in this picture?) he found things going from bad to worse until in 1948 he was so hard up for a way to make ends meet that he once said he'd do something about it if he were president.

This chance remark was overheard by a sincere and earnest patriot who thereupon decided that Joe Blow was the man who:

Should be the next president of the United States.

Would know what to do about "them Russians."

Would bring down prices.
Would fire the jobholders.
Would give Uncle Elmer a job.
Would lower taxes.
Would increase pensions.
Would save money.
Would spend money.

Joe Blow would make a good president. He doesn't know what it's all about, and by the time he found out it would be time to elect his successor. He has made no promises. Bless his heart, he doesn't even know he's in the running, which accounts for the honest look on his face.

Joe is unspoiled, unafraid, dead broke, totally unprepared and he's all ours. We saw him first. It was one day in a bus. Cube steaks were 60 a pound. Butter was a dollar, some place in Europe wanted umpteen more billions. Joe looked at Joe and decided he was the only guy left in the country who could do anything about it. From now until a year from next November you take your candidate, and we'll take Joe.

Handicaps

A Sermonette

By REV. EMIL C. KLUTEY

Pastor of Salem Evangelical and Reformed Church.

"If I must needs glory, I will glory of the things which concern mine infirmities."

—2 Corinthians 11:30

FIRST I want to tell you about some birds with handicaps, [illegible] some people with. [illegible] the poor Man-O'-War [illegible] one has called him "the [illegible] with the wobbly landing [illegible] know that in aviation [illegible] gear is as important in [illegible] as in landing. Because [illegible] Man-O'-War bird has such [illegible] and toes he would [illegible] helpless if he landed [illegible] water or a flat stretch of [illegible] the only way he can [illegible] by leaping from a high [illegible] branch at the top of a [illegible]

But before you start feeling too [illegible] this bird you might note [illegible] has compensated for [illegible] disadvantages he has to [illegible]. For nature has made [illegible] world's champion soarer! [illegible] Man-O'-War bird can [illegible] the air longer, and [illegible] effort, than any other [illegible] existence. Some scientists [illegible] think or suspect that [illegible] sleep up there. At the [illegible] end of the Panama [illegible] one can see scores of these [illegible] continually soaring high in [illegible] air, never seeming to come [illegible] to rest.

The phenomenon of nature [illegible] compensating advantages for birds and animals [illegible] a common one. In the case of [illegible] however, nature felt that [illegible] could rely on his own brains [illegible] ingenuity. So, for the most [illegible] we must supply our own compensations.

Never despise a handicap if you have one. You can if you will make your handicap a help. Let me tell you a story that will illustrate what I mean.

She was a little round-faced girl with a beautiful smile. But she had come to work in a wheel chair. Some one held the door open and she glided in with surprising ease. When the elevator door opened, she entered with a cheery word for the operator and a smile for those who crowded in after her. This was in the Goodwill Industries of Detroit, Mich., where 250 handicapped workers were employed. Mr. C. F. Hamilton, who tells the story, says: "We stopped at the second floor to attend chapel service. When the song leader announced a hymn, the girl of the wheel chair swung around to the piano and began to play. She sang feelingly and played beautifully, and one was not aware that her feet were useless and that she had never been able to walk.

"This woman with a real handicap worked in the office every day, I was told, and always appeared cheerful and gay. She might well be an inspiration to all of us. She had learned with Paul the apostle to overcome her infirmities." If you have a handicap do not despise it. Do not be disheartened by it, nor discouraged. Make your handicap a help. You can if you will. God will give you grace to bear it, and use it, and make it a means of blessing to you and to others.

Missionary To Africa To Speak At Christ for World Convention

REV. DONALD W. McCLURE

Rev. Donald W. McClure, pioneer missionary of the United Presbyterian church to the South Sudanese in Africa, will be one of the main speakers in the "Christ-For-the-World" convention to be held in Marion next weekend. He has had missionary experience in an agricultural school in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan where he had charge of a large dairy herd and an irrigation project. While on a big game hunt along the upper reaches of the Nile, he met the primitive Nilotic tribes and determined to invest his life with the primitive people in the interior of the dark continent. Mr. McClure has been described as "red, rash and religious."

His career in Africa has been one of high adventure, full of excitement, fighting malaria as well as marauding hyenas, lions and crocodiles, at the risk of his life, challenging the powerful witchcraft of the area, reducing the language of the natives to writing, translating the Bible and winning the first converts of the tribes to the Christian faith. His theme for the meeting on Friday night will be "Behind the Scenes in a Primitive Tribe."

This program will be held in the Trinity Baptist church on South Main street, sponsored by the women's department of the Marion County Council of Churches, with Mrs. Leo Keller presiding. Miss Elizabeth Turner, missionary to China, will share this program. Mr. McClure will address the students of Edison Junior High school on Friday morning, will speak during the Sunday school hour at the Salem Evangelical and Reformed church, and preach at 10:45 a. m. Sunday at the First Evangelical and Reformed church. He will appear for a brief message at the mass meeting on Sunday at 3 p. m. in Garfield park pavilion with R. G. LeTourneau who will be the main speaker. He will share the program Sunday night with Miss Turner at the Trinity Baptist church under the sponsorship of the Christian Youth department of the Council of Churches. His theme for Sunday night will be "Adventuring with Christ in Darkest Africa."

At a special mass meeting of the three-day convention Saturday night in the Garfield park pavilion, Mr. LeTourneau, noted industrialist and designer of earth-moving machinery, will speak. With him will be Mrs. Dorothy Strathearn, lyric soprano soloist, who is familiarly called the "Gospel Nightingale of America." This program is being sponsored by the Marion Kiwanis club. The mass meeting featuring Mr. LeTourneau and his party Sunday afternoon in the pavilion will be sponsored by the Marion County Ministerial association.

To Unveil Plaque At Trinity Church

A special feature of the service at Trinity Baptist church tomorrow morning will be the unveiling of a memorial plaque in memory of Mr. and Mrs. James S. Rayl, who were the founders, and for many years the teachers of the adult Bible class of Trinity church which bears their name. The bronze plaque has been given to the church by their daughter, Mrs. Amy Rayl Conyers of 234 Pearl street, in memory of her parents, and will be unveiled during the ceremony by her son, Rayl Conyers of 244 South Greenwood street.

The Rayl Bible class, taught by E. O. Uncapher, will celebrate the event with a "homecoming" program during the Sunday school hour. Committees are working to secure the attendance of over 100 members of the class to share in this celebration. Reminiscences will be given by some of the members who attended the class when Mr. and Mrs. Rayl were teachers. A basket of flowers will be placed on the altar in their memory. The history of the class will be read and a mixed quartet from the members of the class, composed of Mrs. C. F. Forry, Mrs. Ralph Wingett, F. H. LeMasters and G. B. Layman, will sing the class song. Mrs. Forry, assistant superintendent of the adult department and assistant teacher of the class, will preside and Mrs. C. G. Ritzler will conduct devotions.

The pastor, Rev. J. B. Holloway, will have charge of the unveiling ceremonies during the worship service and will preach on the theme: "Religion With An Iron Lung."

GOOD FELLOWSHIP
Generally speaking, the best people in our city are found in the House of the Lord on Sunday. We need their fellowship. It is possible to tell a man's character by the kind of company he keeps. The best company in the world and the warmest friendship any man ever had can be found in church. We need the uplifting fellowship and warm friendship that our church provides. Christian fellowship is indispensable to a happy Christian life, and many times has been the means of bringing those who know not God, to know Him and Jesus Christ, His Son, as their Savior.

Snow Guards Erected at Garage Doors Winter Aid to City Dwellers

YOUR HOME TODAY and TOMORROW

by W. Wadsworth Wood

Preparing for Fall

The average suburban resident does not need very much instruction or advice about taking the proper care of the insect screens which are taken down each fall, or about the correct hanging and fitting of the storm-sash and storm vestibules, which will help to save heating energy and make the house more comfortable for the next six months. However, there are other and very important matters to think about, one of which may save the home owner many hours of hard labor.

If you were born and raised on a farm or in the real country, you know the value of snow-guards. If you were born in the city or in any well-settled community, you probably never even heard of them. A snow-guard is a protection against the drifting of snow and the formation of deep and heavy snowbanks in certain important places such as the garage entrance, the front door, or the roadway to the public street or highway.

To begin with, the average garage, door or roadway can be protected against snow-drifts with very little effort. Very good snow-guards can be made of slats strung on wire, so that they form a loose fence, and this can be placed along the sides of a road which it is important to keep open, or short sections of it can be set on both sides of the garage doors. Portable, light snow-guards can be made of rough boards nailed to a brace, and will be found very effective in protecting doorways against drifts. Old shutters, old doors, or any other portable large-surfaced pieces may be used in place of these. The sole object being to break up the natural drift of a heavy storm.

Most of the homes which were built in exposed places where the wind was unchecked, were planted with trees or shrubs so as to form wind-breaks and snow-guards. Naturally, such planting provided shade and good landscaping effects, but the prime purpose was protection.

It costs but a few dollars, and a few hours time, to make sure that your establishment will not be buried in snow-drifts. Find out from which direction the bad storms come, or determine the usual wind direction if you live in a climate which is subject to heavy snows. Have your guards ready, and save yourself much hard work in digging out.

The value of snow-guards is recognized by most highway authorities and they are now in general use throughout the country.

FIRST AID TO AILING HOUSE

—By ROGER C. WHITMAN—

Paint Peels Off

Q.: I bought a brick-veneered house over a year ago. I painted the window frames and porch columns last spring, and now the paint is all peeling off clean to the board. The neighbors tell me the man who owned the place before me never could make paint stick on the columns and casings. How can I make the paint job succeed?

A.: When doing an outside paint job, you should make sure that the surfaces are both dry and warm. If damp and cold the paint will fail. Rub down the wood until you get a good smooth surface, using a scraper, sandpaper, and steel wool or a wire brush. Dust off and apply a good quality house paint, being careful to thin the first coat according to manufacturer's directions. Do not apply the paint in thick coats, for they will not dry well, and will probably remain sticky for a long time. Do not start painting early in the morning; wait until the sun has dried off all dampness. The temperature should be at least 50 degrees. Columns should be set on special iron bases to allow ventilation.

Mrs. Everett Hostess To Church Circle No. 3

The October meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Paul Clements of 887 East Church street, with Mrs. Nettie Stone as assistant hostess.

Fly Warning Issued To Area Wheat Growers

Special to The Star

UPPER SANDUSKY, Sept. 20—The Fly-free date for Wyandot county, September 26, was announced here today by County Agent S. C. Cashman. He urged wheat growers not to seed any fields before this date to keep Hessian fly infestation to a minimum.

Though a very small per cent of the wheat was damaged by the fly in the county last year; that fact, Cashman said, is no insurance against a serious attack this year unless the date is observed by all planters.

Experiments in this area show, he added, the period immediately after the date set is the best for maximum yield on well-drained and prepared soil. Sowing before the date gains nothing from the standpoint of yield and encourages the infestation of the Hessian fly.

Since U. S. Will Lose on Housing Anyway, Why Not Start Now?

By FREDERICK C. OTHMAN

United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20—So a desperate citizen—you, maybe—buys a five-room bungalow with a leaky cellar today for $10,000 and gets a 90 per cent, government insured mortgage

Next week, or next month or even next year the market for bungalows in out-of-the-way subdivisions slumps just 10 per cent. You've lost your $1,000 down payment. The house—it's not yours now because you wouldn't get a dime for yourself if you sold it—isn't so hot anyway.

The real estate market looks like it's still on the way down. You pack up your family and walk out and who's left holding the bag?

Good, old, generous Uncle Sam, of course. He insured the mortgage.

So if the government is going to lose money on thousands of homes eventually, demanded the celebrated architect, Louis Justement, why shouldn't it take the loss now instead of later? And thus put houses on the market at prices people can afford?

Lawmakers Squirm

The lawmakers squirmed at that one So did the other architects and civil engineers called into Washington by a joint congressional committee for ideas on how to end the housing shortage

The gray-haired Justemen, designer of some of America's most imposing structures, calmly eyed the startled ones His was no crack-brained scheme It wasn't even his own idea but rather the considered suggestion of the urban planning committee of the American Institute of Architects This organization is about as conservative as they come

The plan, continued Justement would stimulate house building as nothing else possibly could

"Mightn't it overstimulate house building to the detriment of other construction?" asked Harry M Brown of Baltimore, representing the Maryland Society of Civil Engineers Architect Justement puffed impassively on his cigaret

"It will certainly stimulate controversy," observed Sen Joseph R McCarthy of Wisconsin 'But whether the plan is wise or unwise I think we all must agree it would be a tremendous stimulus to the housing industry"

Beautiful Simplicity

The committeemen and the house designers agreed to that, all right, because anybody could buy a new house and be guaranteed against loss

'That's the real beauty of the plan," Justement said 'It's extreme simplicity"

Under it the government would insure mortgages as usual But if the value of the house dropped, so would the size of the mortgage Uncle Sam would absorb the loss The scheme would last for five years, apply to any house priced less than $14,000 and, according to Justement, would cost the taxpayers no more than the present system.

The experts felt there wasn't much way for house prices to go now except down They're working hard, they said on modular construction (wherein houses are built so the pieces fit) and on methods of precutting lumber in size at the mill

"And I understand that the modular system will cut costs from five to 10 per cent," Sen. McCarthy said. "And if pre-cut lumber is used in addition, the savings can run up to 25 per cent"

The architect doubted if housing prices could be slashed that much But if they are, said Justement, all the more reason the government should take its losses now instead of later. And that's something to to think about seriously The government which can't win no matter what, is thinking hard

TRUMAN CALLS POLICY MEET

Assembles Staff for Discussion of Problems Arising During Absence.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Sept 20—President Truman returned to Washington from his 20-day trip to Brazil today and immediately called the White House staff to meet at noon to discuss the important business which accumulated in his absence.

One of the first questions facing the Chief Executive after his Rio journey was whether to call a special session of congress to deal with assistance for Europe.

Undergoing the importance attached to Europe's plight, Secretary of State Marshall arranged to leave a meeting of the UN assembly in New York for a quick trip to the capital tomorrow, presumably to give the President his special session views.

Marshall Backs Session

Marshall has already stated his belief that there is a crisis which can not wait until the scheduled reconvening of congress in January.

Marshall will attend a meeting of the President's food policy committee Monday and then return to New York to continue his duties as head of the American delegation to the UN assembly. Secretary of Agriculture Anderson and Secretary of Commerce Harriman also are on the food study committee.

Top Questions

Here are the top priority questions which will receive his attention in the immediate days ahead:

►—Foreign Aid. Will a special session of congress be necessary to provide stop-gap aid to Europe pending enactment of the long-term Marshall plan?

►—Prices. Food and other costs have taken another sharp turn upward since the President left for Brazil Aug. 31.

►—Politics. A new chairman for the Democratic national committee probably will have to be found shortly.

►—United Nations. The latest critical exchange between the American and Soviet delegations undoubtedly will come in for presidential attention.

►—China-Korea. Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, just back from a special mission to these countries, is expected to see the President and submit his report.

28 SOLDIERS JUMP FROM CRIPPLED PLANE

By The Associated Press

MANILA, Saturday, Sept. 20—Twenty-eight passengers and crewmen parachuted from a lost U. S. Army transport into the central Luzon tonight, and searchers at noon today announced spotting the wreckage of the plane, also "possible sighting" of some personnel.

The U. S. 13th Air Force to which the transport was attached said wreckage sighted 150 miles northeast of Manila had been identified as that of the missing C-46, abandoned in foul weather enroute from Okinawa to Clark field.

Planes searching a sector 60 miles farther north reported the "possible sighting" of personnel, an Air Force spokesman said.

Thirty-five U. S. Army planes began the vast search at dawn, covering seas and islands of the whole northern Philippines area. Several Navy aircraft joined, scanning Luzon's rugged east coast and the Manila bay area itself.

ness to assume their new role in the 80th congress, by their reluctance to cease being critics and grumblers and dissenters. "Senator Taft's speech at Columbus admitted as much, but since their inexperience served to make his leadership more marked, the senator from Ohio was not too disturbed," she continued.

She charged the Republican congress with saving pennies by blocking the school lunch program for children, crippling the reclamation programs to provide better light and power for large sections of the country and bowing to the influential lobbies seeking wealth for hundreds instead of health and prosperity for millions.

Completing yesterday afternoon's session were reports of officers and a quiz program conducted by Miss Esther Pinsky of Bellaire. The program dealt with questions on party activities and national affairs. Prizes were won by Mrs. Blanche Wall of Dayton who was celebrating her seventy-fourth birthday yesterday, Mrs. Elizabeth Aitken of Zanesville, Mrs. Marie Campbell of Youngstown, Mrs. Helen Howard of Columbus, Mrs. Anna Oyster of Youngstown, Mrs. Catherine Dobbs of Barberton, Mrs. Mayme Chensey of Youngstown, Mrs. John Scheu of Dayton, Miss Ida Sacksteder of Dayton, Mrs. 'Julia Downing of Youngstown and Mrs. Marguerite Parrish of Dayton.

This morning the members heard reports of district officers and standing committees. Speaker for the morning session was Miss Martha Hosfelt of Ravenna, whose subject was "The Progress of the UN."

National, state and district party workers were scheduled to give talks at today's luncheon meeting. Miss Blatt's subject was to be "Yes, We've Had Enough."

spokesmen for the Soviet Ukraine and for Yugoslavia who were scheduled to address the assembly in its heaviest day of general debate.

New evidence of the determination behind the Soviet campaign came last night in a debate-filled meeting of the assembly's steering committee when Soviet Delegate Andrei A. Gromyko, in a losing fight, identified support of proposals for restriction of the big-power veto in the security council with "hostility" to the Soviet Union itself.

He said that "certain influential circles and peoples are behind the campaign" to restrict the veto and the campaign was "hostile' to the Soviet Union. He did not mention it, but Secretary of State George C. Marshall had told the assembly two days earlier that the United States favored drastic modification.

embrace only the Mt. Gilead plant. The company had sought to have the injunction cover both the Galion and Mt. Gilead plants

R. J. McBerty, company president led the list of ten or more witnesses called to the stand in the morning to testify. Included among those testifying they had been restrained from entering the plant by pickets were John Hudnell and Hortense Jenkins, company production workers. Following the noon recess testimony of the defendants was taken with Edward J. Duck heading the list of those appearing for the UAW. The courtroom was well filled for the all day hearing.

The Mt. Gilead plant reopened Monday following issuance of the restraining order. Tuesday approximately 90 of the plant employes were laid off "for lack of parts." The Mt. Gilead plant is partially dependent upon the Galion works for materials, the figure given in testimony yesterday was "five to ten per cent"

Pickets at the Mt. Gilead plant have been removed following the issuance of the restraining order.

Tardy Autumn To Arrive Officially Next Tuesday

By The United Press

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20—The U. S. naval observatory "snot the stars" and reported today that autumn will officially arrive a few hours late next Tuesday, Sept. 23.

Fall comes in at 6 29 p. m. EST., on that day—the exact moment that the sun will cross the equator.

The observatory explained that the lateness of fall this year is tied in with 1948. That will be leap year when the calendar adds an extra 24 hours—Feb. 29—to make up the time the sun's year has gained on the calendar year in the previous four year period.

"LAUSCHE QUESTION" GIVEN TO COMMITTEE

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 20—Ohio organization Democrats today tossed the "Lausche question" into the lap of a screening committee named to consider candidates for governor and other state offices.

The committee, headed by John Kelly of Toledo, was appointed at yesterday's session of state Democratic central committeemen and county chairmen who adjourned without endorsing candidates.

Unofficially the question on lips in general was, "who else but former Gov. Frank J. Lausche for governor?"

Albert A. Horstman of Dayton, party state chairman, asserted the screening committee was "not against anybody nor is it for anybody." He added that its recommendations would not be binding on the state organization.

Although Horstman said the chief meeting topic was finances, with a goal of $16,000 for county chairmen to raise, the Lausche question easily drew top billing outside the caucus rooms.

Horstman, who failed to set foot in Lausche's office while the Clevelander was governor, kept mum about a meeting he held Thursday in Dayton with Lausche and former Gov. James M. Cox.

were found at the entrance to the lane.

The car is believed to have been driven by a group of high school boys from Richwood. Sheriff Retterer is investigating the report this morning.

The Greens have three other children, Marilyn, 14, Donald 12, and Jacqueline, 10. All three children were at home yesterday.

Mrs. Green said Roxie was wearing a navy blue skirt, red jacket, white sox, brown wedgie type shoes with open toes. She is five feet four inches tall, a brunette, and weighs 130 pounds.

No reason for their daughter's disappearance could be advanced by Mr. and Mrs. Green They said their family life has always been excellent, there had been no misunderstandings or emotional upsets that might have given the girl a reason for leaving home Mrs. Green said that Roxie had always taken them into her confidence and had never before been away from home without letting them know where she was going.

Roxie, according to her mother, was getting along satisfactorily in school. She is a sophomore at Prospect High school, well known and popular with other students. She was in good health. Her parents for these reasons are seriously alarmed at her disappearance.

Mr. Green is an employe of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad serving as a foreman at Walbridge, near Toledo. He was at home last night and is participating in the search.

Assisting Sheriff Retterer and Mr. Green are friends of the family, George Roller and Dale Sparks. A check is being made this morning of Roxie's school friends in an effort to uncover a lead to her whereabouts.

Harding Band Presents New Act At Football Game Intermission

A new and different kind of formation by the Harding High school band at the Harding-Columbus South football game Friday night at Harding Stadium was a highlight of the halftime intermission.

Under the direction of Homer Huffman, the band gave its version of a "county fair" by forming a merry-go-round, and a side show. This was done completely with band lights, with the stadium lights darkened. The band members with varicolored lights formed the merry-go-round and the twirlers had lighted batons. For the side show, the players formed the tent and the performances were given by the three band majorettes. Martha Douce presented a new flag twirling performance, and Elaine Everett and Dorothy Cooper twirled with lighted batons. During the formation of the merry-go-round, the band played "And the Band Played On." and for the side show, "Farmer in the Dell March."

Grandma Shot

The recently popularized song, "Feudin' and Fightin'," was also dramatized by the band as a part of its formations. At the line in the song, "Why'd they have to shoot poor Grandma?" an aerial bomb exploded, a performer on the field dressed as Grandma fell to the ground and was carried off on stretchers.

To open their portion of the halftime performance, the Harding band gave a fanfare and then a salute to the Columbus South fans with an "S" They concluded their show with a double "H" and the playing of the school fight song and the alma mater.

Members of the visiting band, in the first portion of the intermission, saluted Marion spectators with an "M" and then presented a version of "school days" with a teeter-totter pertaining to the recess period. During this, the band members sang "School days" They concluded their show with an "S" for their own school.

In the period before the game, the Harding band greeted all the fans by spelling "HI" first to one side and then to the other. While the band was in this formation, the cheerleaders led the Harding crowd in a cheer, "Hello South."

"Singapore," Exciting And Romantic, Coming To Palace

"Singapore," one of the year's most exciting melodramas blending action and romance, opens Sunday at the Palace theater. It will play through Tuesday.

Co-starring Fred MacMurray and Ava Gardner the film is laid entirely in the Far Eastern metropolis from which it takes its title. It is a tale woven around a determined and reckless pearl smuggler who has only two interests in life, a beautiful woman and priceless pearls. Miss Gardner is seen as a vacationing school teacher. Heading the featured cast are Roland Culver, Richard Haydn, Thomas Gomez, Spring Byington and Porter Hall.

Highlighting the added attractions will be a film in the "This Is America" series, "Whistle in the Night." It is a story of America's railroads from big city terminal to whistle-stop depot. It is the saga of America's second largest industry, its achievements and its hopes. Others will be a Popeye cartoon in color "Popeye and the Pirates," and the latest news.

"The Great Waltz"

Billed to be shown Wednesday through Friday is "The Great Waltz" starring Luise Rainer, Fernand Gravet and Miliza Korjus, Viennese opera star, with Hugh Herbert.

A glamorous musical drama based on the life of Johann Strauss the waltz king, the film deals with the life and loves of Strauss, played by Gravet, his wife, Poldi played by Miss Rainer, and the opera singer with whom he was infatuated, enacted by Miliza Korjus. It tells about the composer from the time he loses his position as a bank clerk and turns to music to his final honors in the Emperor's court.

Short subjects will include a Sportlight short, "Making the Varsity," the latest news, and a noveltoon in color, "Much Ado About Mutton."

Sharing top honors with the two is Joan Caulfield. In featured supporting roles are Wanda Hendrix, Frank Faylen, Elizabeth Patterson and Percy Kilbride.

"Welcome Stranger" is a down-to-earth human story of life in a typically small New England community. Bing is cast as an easy-going doctor who agrees to substitute for the town's beloved old practitioner while the latter takes a long-delayed vacation. The old physician played by Fitzgerald, leads the town in resenting Bing's attitude. However it isn't long before the Crosby charm makes itself felt in the community.

Coss and Hill Carry Prexy Mail In First Local Win Since 1945

By GEORGE ROEST

Harding blossomed out as a winner last night, handing ill-fated Columbus South a 19-0 setback.

Approximately 3,000 fans witnessed the Presidents in their first victory since 1945.

It was Harding from the opening whistle to the closing gun, and it was only their own fouling the lines that prevented the score from being two touchdowns greater.

Smith, Gherman Shine

Harding scat backs Clarence Smith and Dick Gherman did their share in piling up the yardage, but Jim Hill, steady right half, stole the show with two brilliant break-away runs that netted touchdowns.

On the line, Bob Short and Jack Bishop played a defensive game that won't be forgotten by South backs.

The Presidents scored their first touchdown in the second quarter, after threatening in the first. Apparently, taking to heart the defensive drill they practiced all week, the Presidents forced South back from its own 20 to the 8 and then charged Levy, causing his put to go only to the 16. Smith carried to the seven on two plays and Coss quarterbacked it the rest of the way in, carrying for gains of six and one yard. Gherman dropkicked for the extra point.

South Halts Harding

In the third quarter a Harding drive was halted on the South two and a half, then the Bulldogs kicked out, Marion getting possession once more, this time on the 31. Hill shot off right tackle and with the aid of good interference scooted to pay dirt.

The play came late in the third quarter and with less than a minute of the last gone Hill scored again.

Dowler of Columbus ran the kickoff back from the South 20 to the 35 and South tried to pick up a first down on the fourth, after they got to the 43. Then Marion took over. Smith moved the ball to the 40 yard stripe. Then it was Hill again, and the final score. Dick Huddle comes in for a share of the credit on the play for eliminating the safety man with a well executed block.

Even with the plaudits of the fans echoing in their ears the Harding coaching staff went into a huddle after the game to map strategy for mowing down future opponents.

Next Friday the Prexies play at Tiffin against Tiffin Columbian.

BELLEVUE BEATEN BY UPPER SANDUSKY

Special to The Star

UPPER SANDUSKY, Sept. 20—Upper Sandusky topped Bellevue in a see-saw NOL game here last night, 13-8.

Kent scored all the way from midfield in the second quarter on a pass from Mason. Cope's kick was good for the Rams. Bellevue's Gabel caught the return kickoff, slipped the ball to Soldano, and while Soldano galloped alone down the left to the 25, Gabel and interference drew the Rams to the right. After marching to the one, Gabel plunged over. The try was no good.

In the third, Bellevue's Baldwin caught the Ram quarterback behind the Upper goal after a bad pass from center, putting Bellevue ahead 8-7. After Bellevue fumbled in the fourth, Mason circled right end from the 34 for pay dirt.

CHESTERVILLE BEATS PROSPECT, 20-12

Chesterville spoiled Prospect's bid for a victory in Double M county six-man football league game at Chesterville yesterday afternoon, downing the visitors, 20-12.

Chesterville opened scoring in the first period with a pass from Sautters to Doyle. Prospect scored in the second quarter after recovering a fumble in Chesterville territory.

The deadlock was broken when a 40-yard pass, Doyle to Snyder, put the ball on the two inch line and Simmons plunged from there. Doyle passed to Sautters for the point.

Prospect then put a long drive in motion, which paid off with a score.

Chesterville racked up their final marker in the last act, Sautters dashing 20 yards. A pass, Doyle to Ebersole, was good for the point.

Cards Win As Bums Loaf To Keep Hopes Flickering

By The Associated Press

Brooklyn still awaits, with poised cowbells and ready sirens the signal to celebrate the mathematical pennant clinching, now two days overdue.

While the Dodgers lingered in the vicinity of Hugh Casey's restaurant, with an ear cocked toward radio reports of the Cardinal game, the St. Louis gang fanned their flickering hopes last night with a 5-2 win over Chicago.

There was nothing the Brooks could do about it yesterday for the schedule makers had given them an off day after a impromptu "welcome home" celebration at Penn station on their arrival from the west.

One more Brooklyn win or one more St. Louis loss would be the clincher, sending the Dodgers into the World Series with the New York Yankees a week from Tuesday. Already the oddmakers have labeled the Yanks a 17-10 favorite.

Stout pitching by Al Brazle, until he faltered in the ninth, and solid slugging by Terry Moore, Enos Slaughter, Red Schoendienst and Marty Marion highlighted the Cards' victorious 13-hit attack on Johnny Schmitz and Emil Kush.

All other National league teams were idle and the only American league game was washed out in the third inning with Boston holding a 2-0 edge over Washington at that stage.

Rookie Charles (Chuck) Stobbs, 18-year-old southpaw from Norfolk, Va., making his first big league start, pitched three flawless innings before the game was called.

CRESTLINE DEFEATS GALION ELEVEN, 15-0

Special to The Star

GALION, Sept. 20 — Crestline Bulldogs scored a 15-0 victory over Galion here last night.

Sand received a pass from Winemiller that was good for 30 yards and a score in the first quarter. Gherisch carried on a reverse around end for 20 yards and the second period tally. Winemiller to Sand worked for the point.

In the third quarter the Crestline forward wall charged a Galion punter in the end zone and downed him after he recovered the blocked punt.

LARUE SMOTHERS CLARIDON, 44-10

The LaRue six-man football team got off to a flying start in the Double M league yesterday afternoon with a 44-10 romp over Claridon on the LaRue field.

The west siders tallied three touchdowns in the opening period with Ralph Wilson, fullback, following powerful interference into pay dirt for two of the counters. Richard Lee, center picked up a fumble in the Claridon backfield and scored the other six-pointer.

Wilson tallied once more for LaRue in the second quarter and again in the fourth. Marion Lightfoot ran around left end for a third period score. Wilson dropkicked four out of five tries for the other eight points.

Claridon scored in the second quarter when Creasap intercepted a pass near the LaRue goal against the second stringers and galloped across. He dropkicked for the extra two points. The east enders got their last two points on a safety in the final period when a bad pass from center put the ball behind the goal line with the reserves of both teams on the field.

Gene Wittibslager suffered a broken ankle in the second stanza following a tackle of a Claridon ball carrier.

Next Friday LaRue will be host to Prospect in a league contest, starting at 3:30

HOSTESS TO CIRCLE

Mrs Juanita Smith was hostess for a meeting of Circle 2 of the First Presbyterian church Thursday afternoon in the church recreation room. A song by the group, "What a Friend We Have in Jesus," and the Lord's Prayer opened the meeting. Eleven members responded to roll call and Mrs. Harry Thompson conducted devotions. A report of a recent general aid meeting was given by Mrs. Hubert Turner, and Mrs George Bechtel reported on missionary work. Mrs Charles Stephenson, in charge of the program, read from the book, "Little People of the Bible." The mystery box went to Mrs. Stephenson, and a covered dish dinner followed the meeting. The next meeting at the church will be an all-day meeting with Mrs. Turner serving as hostess.

PIKEVILLE, Ky., Sept. 20 — A 13-year-old boy faces a life prison term for his part in the armed robbery of Harold E Roberts of Fords Branch last July.

Crawford Casebolt was convicted by a Pike county circuit court jury, which fixed the penalty. He is believed to be the youngest person in the county ever to face the sentence, to be passed by Judge R Monroe Fields at the end of the current court term.

EVERYBODY SAID THIS HOUSE WAS HAUNTED BY GHOSTS AN' GORKLES—BUT I AIN'T GOT NO FOLKS, AN' MRS. MEANY WAS CHASIN' ME--

NO, MA'AM, SHE IS A CRUEL, WICKED LADY WHO HAS A SCHOOL FOR KIDS—SHE HATES KIDS, AN' I GUESS SHE HATES ME WORST OF ALL--

LOVE'S PERILOUS PATH

By ADELE GARRISON

"THAT's the general idea," Mary said, but there was something in her eyes which belied the flippancy. "I want to turn all my charm on the old doc, and I don't want any celebrated femmes sitting on the side lines."

"We promise you that you shall not be interrupted," Katharine said. "I will bring Dr. Twitchell in here, and your aunt and I will travel in some other direction."

"Don't travel too far!" Mary adjured her quickly. "I may want to summon you for reenforcements if the old darling proves adamant to my arguments."

"We'll be in the sitting room," Katharine told her. "Now, suppose you shed your outer garments and climb into that bed for 10 minutes."

"Life for me is just one bed-climb after another," Mary said plaintively, as she obeyed Katharine's directions.

"And will be while you're my patient," Katharine returned, pulling the sheet and blanket up over her. "Now relax, and in 10 minutes your aunt and I will be back. Here's your little bell. If you need us, we'll be in the sitting room."

"I won't need you, but is it permitted to ask: 'What then?' " she queried impudently.

The Program

"Certainly," Katharine said imperturably. "A hot shower, a cold one, a rubdown, and a morale-uplifting with your cosmetics and your hair. Then you'll be ready to see your physician, your husband, and any other inquiring friends who rate a welcome. 'Bye, now!"

She slipped her hand beneath my elbow, and we went into the sitting room, carefully closing the door behind us.

"Let's exchange news notes," she said. "Did you get hold of Noel?"

Yes," I replied, and she looked at me sharply.

'Is he ging to be difficult?" she asked.

"I'm afraid so," I said. He began to make strenuous objections to Mary's going out tomorrow night, and I told him that if you were permitting the outing, he could be sure it was all right."

She Told Him

"From the expression of your mobile mouth," Katharine said laughingly, "I guess you told him, all right! Are you going to be able to see him before he sees Mary? But that's Foolish Question Number One. That's what you set out to do, and you don't usually fail in your commitments."

"He's coming to my studio at five-thirty," I said. "How he managed it, I don't know, for he usually leaves at six. But he didn't demur, and I'm hoping he'll be tractable."

"If he isn't, it will 'make no never minds,'" Katharine said cheerily. "You're the lady who can massage his skull with a brick, if he won't yield any other way."

"In my present mood," I began dourly, and Katharine interrupted me with a laugh.

"You like to make the massage a fracture," she said. "But cheer up! He may prove most pliable. And except as a precaution against far-in-the-future temperamental outbursts, your arguments will be academic."

I straightened at that, and looked at hre keenly.

Satisfactory Interview

"Your interview with Dr. Twitchell must have been satisfactory," I said.

"Eminently so," she answered. "I didn't have to put up a single argument, but, of course, I knew I wouldn't. He says with finality that Mary mustn't think of having a child in the near future. She has been through too much."

"Did you tell him that she might give up her career?"

"Yes, and he said that had nothing to do with that question. She is not ready for motherhood under any conditions. But he expressed himself rather vehemently upon the subject of her leaving the stage. He said that with her temperament—and her genius—it would be the same as a death sentence."

Would Tell Noel

"There's a thought!" I said. "He probably would tell Noel that, if you asked him to do it."

"If Noel asked him, he surely would," she said. "That's a reserve arrow in your quiver."

"I'll probably need it,' I told her, and then she rose with a look at her wrist watch.

"The 10 minutes aren't up," she said, "but I'll be going back to Mary. She's probably getting restless. Will you stay here and do the honors for Dr. Twitchell when he arrives at five?"

"Of course," I said. "I wish—"

"Consider it granted," she said clairvoyantly. "You have my permission to tell him that you know of his decision from me, and ask his advice about tackling Noel."
